Letter of recommendation

The following is a letter of recommendation for DANIEL NSUE MARTINEZ. DANIEL worked on a prototype network monitoring system for an Internet Service Provider with only one other team member. Having never worked before with the monitoring software chosen for this project (Grafana), database engine (Prometheus) and network devices, that this particular ISP uses (Juniper), DANIEL nevertheless managed to work through extensive technical documentation and familiarize himself with all of them enough, to build a working prototype in a very short time.

While deploying the monitoring solution prototype DANIEL also got good experience setting up the Hypervisor, that ran the servers (ProxMox) and Debian linux servers command line.

As a teammate DANIEL is very pleasant to work with. He gets along very well with his team members and superiors. During the time in our school DANIEL was also socially active and took part in various activities, such as basketball and volleyball games and board gaming sessions. He also got along very well with students and teachers in our school.

To Whom It May Concern:

It is my pleasure to strongly recommend Daniel Nsue Martinez for a position as a developer and programmer in IT infrastructures at beginner and intermediate level.

I am Marko Kõrv, a head of network engineering and troubleshooting department at Citic Telecom CPC Europe and Russia located in Estonia. I have 20 years of experience working as an IP network engineer and specialist and have seen many young trainees, students and professionals come and go. Daniel is one individual I have worked with who uniquely stands out.

During our time together, Daniel displayed great talents in technical applications, Grafana, Ntopng and several other data visualization tools. I was also impressed about the skillset to collect the raw data from Juniper and Cisco platforms and mold it to user readable form via custom scripted web applications.

It's not just his technical skills that impress me, however. Daniel was a joy to work with because of his amazingly positive attitude and eagerness to stick tightly to deadlines. His can-do attitude were also necessary and valued not just by myself, but by his peers, who often relied on him to get the job done.

I am absolutely confident that Daniel would be a great fit for your company or enterprise. Not only will bring the kind of skills and experiences you're looking for in an applicant, but will also quickly become an asset and help your enterprise grow in any way can.

Sincerely,
Marko Kõrv
